Oxford Carpenters, 1370-1530*
by E. A. Gee

For some time past much interest has been centred on the masons of medieval England, while the work of early carpenters, being in a more perishable medium, has been relatively overlooked; yet their craft was complementary to that of the mason and their skill certainly no less. I have already discussed the Oxford masons in print. My present paper, which is concerned with Oxford carpenters in late medieval times, begins with an introductory essay on the wood-workers' trade in Oxford and then gives a series of biographies, in chronological order, of the more important men. The first appendix lists craftsmen in order of their appearance at each college and includes details of the working life of men not already included in the biographies. The second appendix is an alphabetical one and the only extra material is about wood-workers who were not employed by a college.

Under the heading 'Oxford Carpenters' I have included carpenters, joiners, wood-carvers and sawyers who worked in the town or who were employed by Oxford colleges between 1370 and 1530, but suppliers of wood are not included. Foresters who cut down the trees are noted, for they were often carpenters as well, in much the same way that men who worked at the quarry face were often masons.

The main sources of the information are the bursars' or account rolls of the various colleges, and any statement, unless otherwise noted, is based on an account roll of that date in the college archives. Details about Oriel craftsmen are taken from transcripts of the Treasurers' rolls kindly lent to me by E. M. Jope. The archives at Exeter College, Corpus Christi College and University College have not been seen. References to the building of the precinct walls (1466-72), the chapel and hall (1474) and rooms to the E. and W. of the bell tower (1507/8 and 1508/9) at Magdalen are from transcripts by Dr. Bloxam, kept in the college library.

It has sometimes been difficult to assess a carpenter's working life because two men of the same name have worked over a long period; it is possible that craftsmen in wood were succeeded by their sons of the same name more often than were masons.

Professor Thorold Rogers has pointed out that the carpenter was more ubiquitous than the mason, for his activities covered much more of ordinary life; the normal house for instance and most of its fittings were of wood and the mason only built the chimney breast and perhaps the base walls. It is strange therefore that Oxford accounts would appear to give more detail about masons than carpenters, even allowing for the fact that the colleges were stone built. This is largely because the wood-workers were more anonymous and some accounts only mention unnamed carpenters for years while other craftsmen are recorded by name.

THE RELATIONSHIP OF CARPENTRY TO OTHER CRAFTS

In most cases the master carpenter was subordinate to the master mason, who designed the building and often supervised its erection. Sometimes, however, he achieved equality; for instance Hugh Herland, master carpenter at New College and Winchester College dined as William Wynford's peer in the Warden's house at New College in 1388/9, at high table in the college at a great gaudy in the same year and again in 1390/1, and also the master carpenter was associated with the clerk of the works and the master mason in Thomas Glasier's E. window at Winchester College. At the end of the period Humphrey Coke was usually grouped with great masons like William Vertue and Henry Redman on terms of equality and there are more records of actual working drawings by him than by the masons. In 1513 for instance, when Bishop Foxe intended to build Corpus Christi College, he made a contract with William Vertue, freemason, and Humphrey Coke, carpenter, to erect it according to a plan. Usually only the mason was consulted at such a time, but here mason and carpenter were stated to be joint masters of the works. Sometimes the carpenter was in charge of important work; at Magdalen in 1491/2, when an oratory was being built for the President over the S. walk of the cloister, John Fisher, master carpenter, was in charge, although John Gyll and other masons did the stonework, and in 1503/4 Robert Carow, the noted Oxford carpenter, supervised the building of a new room by the kitchen of the same college and had masons under him.

In any case the one craft necessarily complemented the other and carpentry work progressed at the same time as that of the masons. Moreover much of the equipment needed for a large building operation was made by the carpenter. When the library was being built at Merton in 1377/8, Robert Carpenter supplied timber for a new windlass (6s.), which he and his servant made (27d.), and on the same job in 1378/9 three carpenters constructed the centering for a vault (28. 8d.). When the bell tower at New College was being completed in 1402/3, a carpenter made a cradle in which a mason could be hoisted to fill the put-log holes, and in 1448-50, when Merton bell tower was being built, Cloberry and Abraham, carpenters, made three barrows (4s. 1d.). John White made hods and wheelbarrows and trimmed wood for the scaffold during the building of Magdalen chapel and hall in 1474; John Carpenter made two instruments for loading carts at the same time; a carpenter made a cart (carre) for Merton College (2s. 4d.) in 1490, and in 1504/5 Thomas Walshe constructed a cradle for men white-washing Magdalen chapel (6d.). There are many references to the construction of masons' lodges by carpenters.

DESIGN AND WORK BY CONTRACT

The medieval carpenter, like the mason, worked according to plans and elevations. It appears that before an agreement was concluded between the University and John Godard to fit desks and benches in the Theological School on 11 June 1466, a body of learned men had discussed the lay-out and John was to make the woodwork 'sub forma et modo tractis in eisdem scholis'.

About 1490 John Bryan, an Oxford carpenter working at Woodstock Palace, writing to King Henry VII, says 'that where your grace had a sight bi picture of the ruff of your hall of Wodestok . . . ' showing that he had made a working drawing of the roof. A further reference to a drawing by a carpenter in this period is in a contract for the woodwork of the library of Corpus Christi College dated 1517, by which Robert Carow agrees to fit out the library 'according to a platt made by Humfrey Cooke'. Another drawing had been referred to when in 1513 Bishop Foxe made a contract with William Vertue and Humphrey Coke to build Corpus Christi College after the manner of a double platt made for the over and nether lodging of the same buildings and houses.

From the college records it can be proved that a successful design in the Middle Ages was very often the amalgamation of various good features from other designs. On 11 August 1486, when John Fisher contracted to erect a rood-loft for Merton College, it was suggested that Magdalen College rood-loft should be used as a model for the part from the ground to the lowest part of the coved roof, while the upper part was to be an improvement on that of the loft of St. Mildred in the Poultry, London. When Cornell Clerke contracted to make library presses at Corpus Christi College in 1517, he was to make the new fittings like those at Magdalen in all respects, except that a round knob was to be fitted on the bench ends instead of a popey head as at Magdalen.

Most important carpentry was performed by contract and there are references to such agreements throughout the period. Robert Carpenter made much of the woodwork of Merton library by contract and in 1377/8 was paid £10 and given gloves according to an agreement. In 1396/7 William Wys contracted to do all the carpentry work of New College bell tower for £10. Then there seems to be no reference to a contract for nearly a century until the well-known one of 11 August 1486, in which John Fisher, a London joiner, agreed to construct a roof-loft for Merton College chapel. On the 7 March 1488 Thomas Geffrey, a carpenter of Newbury, agreed to supply timber to Merton College, probably for fitting the organ on the rood-loft. In 1490/1 Mr. Cosemore, a Fellow of Magdalen, and W. Haryson received 20d. expenses for riding to Brackley and 'pro obligationibus et indenturis fiendis ibidem inter carpentarios et Collegium pro edificacione ecclesie ibidem', and in 1495/6 John Cosse, carpenter, was paid an earnest of 4d. for making a mill at Horsedowne in London for Magdalen. Robert Carow made some chests, to contain books given to Magdalen by Mr. Lacy, by agreement in 1496/7, and in 1503/4 he was paid for a new room there built by agreement. The contract of 1513 with William Vertue, mason, and Humphrey Coke to build Corpus Christi College has been mentioned already, and in 1516/17 Thomas Jenkyns received 1d. as earnest to roof the Queen's College library.

Mr. Salzman prints three interesting contracts for work at Corpus Christi College in 1517. One is by Robert Carow to construct the woodwork of the library, another by Humphrey Coke to make woodwork in the Master's parlour and the third by William Colyn and Nicholas More to fit various roofs, and in particular that of the cloister. An entry in the Treasurer's roll of Oriel for 1525/6 gives the form of many of these references: 'Item Karow carpentario pro anglice sylying et aliis rebus in capelle Sancte Bartholomei [at Cowley] ex convencione facta inter Magistrum Ware et ipsum j li.' In 1529/30 William Caxton and one Wotton built a house for Magdalen College according to an agreement (£3).

Carpenters were doubtless versed in assessing costs and so forth, but the only reference to an estimate is in 1517, when Robert Carow calculated the dimensions and cost of roofing the library at Corpus Christi College.

METHOD AND EQUIPMENT

Roofs and houses were usually constructed and assembled at a yard, often some distance away, before their erection on the building site. In 1509/10, for instance, Richard Borow, working for Lincoln College, which had a lot of town property, framed a house ready to set it up (6s. 8d.) and later framed another. The framing yard is known for two major works. During the building of All Souls in 1437/8 wood was stored, sawn and prepared in a garden owned by the Trinitarians, between the E. gate and Rose Lane and rented from the Prior of Hounsloew; the garden was enclosed by a hedge to make it more secure and private. In 1528 the roof for Cardinal College chapel was being framed at Sonning.

The only mention of a carpenters' lodge is when one was constructed in 1437/8 for the craftsmen at All Souls.

Tools are only mentioned rarely. In 1391/2, when part of Merton chapel roof was being renewed, a 'lade' for Robert Carpenter to plane planks was carried to the college for 8d., and during the building of the Queen's College hall carpenters' tools were brought to the college from Witney (16d.).

ORGANIZATION, GRADES AND WAGES

Oxford documents are singularly lacking in reference to gilds, but there was a carpenters' gild when Cardinal College was being built in the early sixteenth century, for Mr. Salzman points out that amongst gilds which tried to interfere with work at the college was that of the carpenters. It cannot have been very influential however for it consisted of only two members, the better of whom had spoilt one house and had constructed a roof which did not fit the walls in either direction.¹⁸

On a big building operation there was a master carpenter and a warden of the carpenters or second in charge, but the carpenters themselves were not subdivided to any degree like the masons of similar calibre. Even the warden was not always necessary, and at All Souls in 1437–43, for instance, while it is clear that the master mason was assisted by Robert Janyns as warden of the masons, John Branche the master carpenter had apparently no intermediary between him and the men. Robert Carow was warden of the carpenters at Cardinal College in 1526–9, but otherwise no other carpenter is described as warden.

There are not many references to apprentices, unless the boys often paid with the carpenter are his apprentices. John Branche, master carpenter at All Souls, received an apprentice in the second week of May 1438/9, who worked until the end of the year. Also at All Souls in 1440/1 Giles Joynor was assisted by a servant and a boy, while William Bate, another joiner, also had a boy, George. In 1469/70 a carpenter and his boy made a door for the buttery at the Queen's College and in 1525/6 William Caxton, carpenter, when constructing a bridge in the meadow at Magdalen, had two of his apprentices with him.

Before passing to wages one should note that the craftsmen received certain perquisites. For instance in 1412/13 Roger Carpenter, when fitting a ceiling to the Queen’s College chapel roof, was given a robe (5s. 3d.) and a pair of gloves (8d.) and in 1509 tilers and carpenters at Magdalen were given drinks (4s.) 'that they may sweat more diligently at their work'.¹⁹

More important carpenters worked by contract but sometimes received an annual salary also. In 1391/2 when part of the timber work of Merton chapel roof was renewed, Roger Carpenter received 23s. 4d. in part payment of his annual salary.

Efforts were made by the government to regulate wages by the Statue of Labourers of 1360. According to this scale master carpenters were to receive 4d. a day and others 3d. or 2d. according to their worth. By 1446 rates permissible had risen for masters to 4d. with food or 5½d. without in the summer, and 3d. or 4½d. in the winter, and for others 3d. or 4d. in the summer and 2½d.
or 4d. in the winter. The cost of food had gone up slightly by 1495 for masters’ rates had risen to 4d. and commons or 6d. without, in the summer, and 3d. or
5d. in the winter.²⁰

Professor Thorold Rogers gives detailed tables of wages received by carpenters throughout the period covered by this paper, and shows fluctuations between just over 4d. in the late fourteenth century to 6d. in the early sixteenth century for ordinary carpenters. In general, wages rose to summer rates in February and dropped again in November.

At Oxford important carpenters of national repute received 1s. a day and local master carpenters from 6d. to 8d., throughout the whole period. Hugh Herland is not actually recorded as working at New College, although he was undoubtedly master carpenter there c. 1388-90, but elsewhere he received 1s. a day. William Wyse, chief carpenter of New College bell tower in 1396/7, was paid by contract, but his working rate was probably 6d. a day. John Branche, master at All Souls in 1437-43 received 3s. a week in winter and 3s. 4d. in the summer. John Fisher, who built the rood-loft at Merton in 1486 and an oratory at Magdalen in 1490/2, always worked by contract. Robert Carow, the chief local carpenter at the end of the fifteenth century and in the early sixteenth century, usually earned 6d. a day, but in 1503/4, when fitting woodwork in Magdalen tower, he received 8d. Otherwise he worked by contract and his position is rather like that of his contemporary, the great mason William Orchard. His rate as warden of the carpenters at Cardinal College in 1525-9 was 8d. Humphrey Coke, the chief carpenter at Cardinal College, was paid 1s. a day.

Ordinary well-qualified carpenters, all through the period, received 6d. a day, winter or summer. Roger Carpenter for instance, who worked at Merton College between 1391-1420 and was the college carpenter at New College in 1396/7, always received 6d., and John Wyltsher, employed at New College between 1427-55, was usually paid 6d. but sometimes 5d., perhaps in the winter. John Philipps (1505-25) and William Caxton (1511-30), well-known carpenters who had long working lives, were paid 6d. a day for all their work. Carpenters at Cardinal College received the same.

Servants, strangely enough, received the same rate as a normal carpenter (6d.) but John Wyltsher’s servant, William Barton, was paid 5d. in 1427/8, and his other servant, Tredwell, received 5½d. at the same time. Robert Carow’s servant James Lynche (1504-25) usually received 6d. a day.

The only apprentice whose rate is recorded is the one employed at All Souls, whose master was John Branche and who, in 1438/9, was paid 2d. a day.

Joiners usually had wages corresponding to carpenters of the same technical quality. Giles Joynor, chief joiner at All Souls in 1439-42, was paid 8d. a day (including servant) in 1439/40, and also worked to contract. In December his rate was 5d. a day. William Bate, also working at All Souls in 1439-41, received 6d., and George Joyner, another joiner at the building of the College was paid 5d. a day. James Lambart, a joiner who worked at Magdalen in 1491-7 earned 6d. a day.

Carvers, being specialists, would be expected to have a higher rate. Richard Tyllok, carver at All Souls in 1439-41, worked by contract, but otherwise his rate appears to be 4s. a week (8d. a day). His assistant or partner, Richard Cawdry, earned 3s. 4d. a week in the same period. Richard Clark, a carver who worked at Magdalen in 1520/1, was paid 8d. a day, John Skowte, who worked at the same college and amongst other things made a set of stalls for St. John's chapel, worked by contract or received 8d. a day, and W. Okay, the warden of the carvers at Cardinal College in 1524/5, was paid the same rate.

Sawyers were often paid as a pair, the upper one in the pit receiving on the average 7d. a day and the lower one 5d., and for some months a pair of sawyers worked at All Souls. One of them was later called Walter Sawyere in 1438/9, but he was always paid so much for a hundred feet of wood sawn. Richard Pytyn (1505-30) and Thomas Caxton (1520-30), who worked extensively all over Oxford, were generally paid 6d. a day.

MISCELLANEAL

Carpenters may have been impressed for the King's work as much as masons, but there are many fewer allusions to it in the records. At Oxford the only reference is in 1396, when Mr. John Hulyn went to London to seek the return of various masons and carpenters who had been taken away from their work on the bell tower at New College.22

Shingles were used frequently in medieval Oxford and large quantities were bought for roofing operations. In 1500/1 Robert Brygge supplied 300 shingles to New College for 2s., and another 3,200 shingles cost 15s. plus 10s. for carriage. In 1505/6 William freeman supplied the same college with 1600 shingles (7s. 6d., plus 5s. for carriage). Richard Kempe de fioystyl sold 300 shingles to Magdalen in 1502/3 (6s. 10d.).

It is seldom that details of roof timbers are given, but when a new house was being built for Magdalen in 1529/30 an entry was made: 'Solut. Thome Caxton pro ly slytyng of walle plattis, gysers et wyndbemys et overcuppyll apud Hedyngton iijs iiijd '.

The mason may have made the window openings, and the glasier perhaps did his share, but often the carpenter made the frames and sometimes lattices were fitted in the openings instead of glass, especially in bell towers. In 1409/10 at New College is an entry: 'Et solutum pro j longo trunco empt. pro reparacione j latys in campanili iiijd '. In 1427/8 Giles Joynor made a new lattice for a belfry window. In 1479/80 it is noted: Et solutum pro cancello ligno pro fenestra maior in camera auditoris ijs vjd . . et solutum pro 2bus cancellis fenestrarum camere auditoris ijs ijd '. In 1496/7 Lambert Jamys made a lattice for a belfry window containing 15 square feet of timber.

BIOGRAPHICAL ACCOUNTS OF THE MORE IMPORTANT OXFORD CARPENTERS

A. ROBERT BATH, carpenter, 1361-96

The most important carpenter in Oxford at the end of the fourteenth century was one Robert, who was working on a new room at the Queen's College in 1361/2 (6 weeks plus nonschons, 17s. 1ld.), and as Robert Bath received 10d. at the same college in 1369. His most important achievements were at Merton College, where he appears to have been master carpenter at the building of the library. It is noted in the first building account of 1371-3 that he had been paid £104 14s. 4d. during three supervisors' turn of office, and in the second account of 1377/8 he received £80, provided timber for a new windlass (6s.) and was paid 18d. and his servant 9d., for work presumably on the 'verne'. In the third account, covering a later period in the same year, he was paid £10, received 18d. for gloves and sold a ladder to the college for 3s. 2d. The fourth account covering 1378/9 records a sum of £14 13s. 4d. paid to him. On 21 September 1363 Robert Bathe, carpenter, lived in a house belonging to St. John's Hospital, inside the E. gate on the S. side, and between 1374-6 he held a house of the hospital in St. Mary Magdalen parish.33 Merton bursar's roll of 1379 states that he received 20s. for outside work, was paid 18d. for going to Chetyndon, and that timber bought from him, probably for desks for the library, cost 20s., and 18 dozen planks, large and small, 61s. 2d. He and his servant also worked for 2 weeks on a gate to the Warden's house (9s. 2d.).

In 1380 Robert Bathe paid 12d. Lay Subsidy and resided in St. Giles.34 At Merton in 1383/4 he was given 13s. 4d. owed to him and 4s. 2d. for a week's work by his servant and himself in the kitchen and hall on tables; he was paid 6s. 8d., over and above Remusby's money, for the making of the library desks. In 1384 he made a grating near the promptuary door (44 days at 5d. and his servant at 3d. a day), and in 1386/7 constructed railings in the hall (2s. 6d.). He did work at Ypston (Ipsden) in 1390 (3s. 4d.) and in 1391/2 was perhaps working on the choir roof when he was paid for 40 weeks and five days at 2s. 6d. a week and his servant at 2s. a week and he planed planks (8d.).

Robert Carpenter made library windows at the Queen's College in 1395/6 (13s. 4d.). It is probable that Robert Carpenter's roof for Merton library is the trussed-rafter one still existing, but its character was changed in 1502/3 when it was ceiled and bosses added. The presses made by him, perhaps on the lectern system, the money for which was supplied by Walter de Rammesbury, fellow of the college, were replaced by others in 1623.

B. HUGH HERLAND, master carpenter, 1360-1405

The chief carpenter and designer of the woodwork at New College, and later at Winchester College, was Hugh Herland, a colleague of the King's mason William Wynford, and chief carpenter to the King when the colleges were built. Most of the facts about his life have been collected by John Harvey and a résumé is given below in order to show the importance of Herland as a craftsman. He was a foreman under his father William Herland, chief carpenter at Westminster and Windsor, in 1360, and they had to impressmen for the work. In 1360 he was granted 8d. a day while at Westminster, and in 1366 a yearly fee of £6 13s. 4d. and was to receive wages of 6d. a day.

When his father died in 1375, he became chief carpenter at Westminster at 18 a day and a yearly robe like that of an esquire of the Household, and during this period made a wooden tester for Edward III's tomb at Westminster. Between 1378 and 1387 he was on repairs at Leeds and Rochester castles and in 1387 advised William of Wykeham, Bishop of Winchester, at Highclere Manor in Hampshire.

William of Wykeham, as Clerk of the King's Works, must have noticed Hugh's craftsmanship, for he employed him on both of his collegiate foundations. Herland's servant dined in New College in 1387/8, and he himself was at the College more than once in 1388/9. He dined in the Warden's house, together with the master mason, William Wynford, twice and four servants accompanied him. In the same year he was at a great gaudy in the college hall, given to the craftsmen on the building work, together with the King's masons Henry Yevele and William Wynford. In 1390/1 he was at high table with Wynford, and his servant was given commons in the college. By 1397/8 a Herland appeared on the college lists and thus both Wynford and Herland's sons had come to college.

On 3 March 1390 Yevele, Wynford and Herland were put in charge of works at Winchester Castle and in this year Yevele and Herland were ordered to supervise work at Canterbury Castle. Herland was master carpenter at Winchester College in 1393 and his likeness was put in the E. window of the chapel by Thomas Glasier; he dined many times with the Founder during the year.\footnote{Ibid., pp. ix and x quoting Wykeham’s Household Roll.}

In 1394 he became chief carpenter at Westminster Hall,\footnote{Harvey, Carpenters, 25.} and designed the magnificent roof there, finished by 1400, and possibly also the roof of the abbot’s house. In 1396 Herland received a grant of a little house at Westminster wherein he kept his tools and made his models (formulae), as he had done for 30 years.\footnote{Andrews, l.c. in note 27.}

Yevele, Wynford and Herland had their appointments as overseers of the work at Winchester Castle confirmed in 1397,\footnote{Ibid.} and during the year his fees as surveyor and King's chief carpenter amounted to £43 3s. 4d.\footnote{Ibid.} He went to live at Kingston-on-Thames in 1400 and had surrendered all his offices by 1405.\footnote{Ibid.}

It is possible that the library roof is the only original one in New College that might have been designed by Herland, for those of the chapel and hall have been destroyed.

C. WILLIAM HICKMAN, master carpenter, 1388-1400

The man in charge of the carpentry work on the site, at New College, seems to have been William Hickman, who was not a local man and later was the chief working carpenter at Winchester College. He dined in college in the seventh week of 1388/9 and was at the Assumption day gaudy. In 1390/1 he was paid 32s. 4d. \textit{pro factura j interdus. in superiora camera mansi custodis}, and a ceiling in the Warden’s oratory, and was paid also for 12 planks called “quarterbords” for the partition. In 1390/1 he, his son and an apprentice were in hall and he was again in college in 1392/3 and in 1399/1400.

D. WILLIAM WYSE, master carpenter, 1396-1403

William Wyse was in charge of the carpenters at the building of New College bell tower in 1396/7 and received £10 in full payment for all the carpentry there, of which £5 was paid by the clerk of the works, John Bouke.\footnote{Id., 311.} He made 5 doors and 11 windows\footnote{Id., 312.} for the tower, receiving 6s. 8d. for the big door, 12d. each for the other 4 doors and 12d. also for the 11 windows, and was paid 75s. 4d. for oak bought through him in Windsor Forest, for hanging the bells and for finishing the woodwork of the tower roof.\footnote{Id., 310.} He and his mates lived in a house hired from Henry Lymmenere for 8 weeks (4s. 6d.) and when the building account for the year finished he was still owed 3s. 1\underline{3}d.\footnote{Id., 313.}
OXFORD CARPENTERS, 1370-1530

He was still working at the college as late as 1399/1400, when he was given commons, and on 15 April 1403 he was appointed chief carpenter at Windsor Castle and Manor, and at Esthampsted and Henley, to have 6d. a day and livery, and succeeded Thomas Fraunceys in that office.45

E. GILES JOYNOR, joiner, 1427-42

Giles Joynor was paid 5s. 11d. for a new lattice for a window in New College bell tower in 1427/8, but his chief claim to fame is that he was the principal joiner at the building of All Souls College. He is first mentioned in the third year 1439/40 and worked from the first week of June until the end of December, and received 8d. a day as a rule, but this included pay for his servant, who was paid 2d. a day for 18 days during his master’s absence in August. In 1440/1 Giles was chiefly employed on the construction of windows. During September and the first week of October he, his servant and his boy made 13 windows at 16d. each and 29 at 8d. each, but thenceforward he is not mentioned by name, although perhaps working.

In the 5th year 1441/2 he worked from February to March and then is not mentioned until the first week of December, when his rate was 5d. a day.

F. JOHN WYLTSHER, carpenter, 1427-55

John Wyltsher worked consistently for New College from 1427/8 until 1454/5 and first appeared at the college in 1427/8, when he carried lead for the chapel roof, and later was paid 12s. 3d. for 24½ days work on a new gate being built against the town’s east gate. His servants were William Barton and John Tredwell. In the same year he and Tredwell fitted a lattice made by Giles Joynor to a window of the bell tower. In the next year he worked for a day on the fuel house, and between 1429/30 did work on Merton College property. He next occurred at New College in 1434/5, when he was working on a latrine in ‘novo loco’ (the stable) (at 5d. a day and 3d. for his man). In 1436/7 the first repairs recorded were to bell wheels; John Wyltsher was paid 2d. for a tool for mending the wheel, 14d. for a plank for it, supplied a bolt for 2d., made a new wheel and the whole cost 17¾d. In the same year he made wooden fittings for the kitchen and also repaired the doors of the stable (22d.). He spent 3 days repairing the scholars’ tables in the hall in 1440/1 (at 5d. a day), and in 1442/3 was 2½ days in the tower working on bell stocks. In 1444/5 he spent 5 days on the same job. In 1448/9 he fitted planks above a large cupboard in the inner vestry, for 2 days, mended trestles in the hall, dressing boards and a window in the kitchen, repaired tables in the hall and fitted new doors to the study by the latrine and to the cloister for 6 days.

E. A. GEE

John Wyltsher was working in the college quite as actively in 1452/3. He and his man worked for 2 days on 'trestyllys' for hanging bells and made a rail for hangings in the chapel; timber costing 3s. 4d. was used and the whole amounted to 5s. 10d. Some railings were next put up in the hall (12s. 8d. including 6s. 8d. for timber). He also received 18d. for the hangings equipment, for planks and for the repair of a door leading to the wood store. The last year in which he worked in the College was 1454/5. He repaired the clock setting (6s. 3d.) and worked on the belfry windows and in the hall.

G. JOHN BRANCHE, master carpenter, 1437-1468

The master carpenter at the building of All Souls College was John Branche, who, like Richard Chevynton the master mason, was probably employed at Abingdon Abbey as well, for in the Trinity Warden's account of 1448/9 a paling was erected between the gardens of John Braunche and John Peperwhit (6s. 6d.). He also worked at other places in Oxford for Branch, carpenter, was given 20d. as a reward by New College in 1465/6 and in 1468 Merton College paid him 11s. 4d. for shingles.

At the building of All Souls he worked fairly consistently. In the first year 1437/8 he was given 14d. expenses for surveying oaks at Eynsham and Schottore (Shotover); he was termed principal carpenter and worked 8 weeks at 3s. 4d. and 6 weeks at 3s. His servant worked 3 days at 5d. and 38 days at 4d.

In the next year 1438/9 he received the winter rate of 3s. in January, but in February his wages rose to 3s. 4d. a week and he continued to work steadily, his rate dropping again in November. He was apparently not at the College in the second week of April (Easter), the fifth week of May (Whitsun) and the last week of December (Christmas), which suggests that he was not an Oxford man.

In the third year his attendances were not quite so regular, but nevertheless quite consistent, his rate rising in February as before; he was not present in the fifth week of July and after the third week of September all the carpenters are paid together. He was not working in the last weeks of December.

In the fourth year 1440/1 he worked quite regularly. At the end of January he received 12d. for 2 days work choosing oak in Cumnor Wood, given by the Abbot of Abingdon; he was only present one week in June and is not mentioned any more in this year after the third week of October.

In the next year 1441/2 some money owed to Archbishop Chichele by the Abbot of Abingdon was paid through him, again suggesting that he was an Abingdon man. He did not come back to All Souls until March and the long absence may mean that he had another important job during that period. He was away for April, but in the first week of May was paid 2s. for making a study. He is not mentioned then until August and worked until December. In the fourth week of that month he received 8s. for making 4 studies and by then the woodwork of the college must have been complete.

Most of the spectacular woodwork would be made by the carver, Richard Tyllok, but to John Branche and his men must be given credit for the moulded beams, roofs and door frames; the chapel roof, in all probability designed by John Branche, happily remains and is the earliest surviving hammer beam roof in Oxford (pl. ix). In the second year 1438/9, in the second week of May, John Branche received an apprentice, who continued to work at 2d. a day until the end of the year. It is possible that John Branche was descended from a carpenter of the same name who became a freeman of Wells in 1407.

Interest is bound to centre more on the specialist craftsmen, and the wood carvers at All Souls were Richard Tyllok, Richard Cawdry and John Mayne. It seems that the first two were in the same firm for they replaced each other and never seemed to be in the college together, implying that like so many craftsmen at this time they were running other work concurrently. John Mayne is only mentioned for one job.

Richard Tyllok is not mentioned by name in the accounts until 1439/40, when he was paid 4s. for making desks in the library. In September and October he was working in the College, with from two to four men, from the fourth week of October to the second week of November inclusive. Richard Cawdry took his place for three weeks and then he returned to work until the end of December. In 1440/1 he came in the second week of January and continued until the last week of February. The work seems to have been on the library fittings and was finished by Cawdry during March and April.

In the first week of September 1440/1 is the entry: "Et solut. predicto Ricardo Tyllok kervere loc. in grosso ad faciendum angelos in tectura capelle in parte soluc. summe maioris" 33s. 4d. and he received 22s. 8d. in full payment for making the angels in the first week of October. His rate was probably 4s. a week.

1. John Bryan, master carpenter, 1470-80

John Bryan did much work in Oxford and also was employed on the King’s palace at Woodstock. He first appeared at New College in 1470, when he was 47 Harvey, Gothic Engl., 99.
paid 5s. for repairing the wheel of the second bell in the belfry, and 2s. for fitting a new latch to the great door of the chapel. In 1474/5 he made 8 feet of crests for the high altar in Merton College chapel, fixed this brattishing (4s. 4d.) and also put up iron fittings for the altar curtains.

In 1476 he mended the door of the latrine and a garden door at New College and nails were bought for the work. He made some beds in 1479/80 at a cost of 9s. 9d. He was working at Magdalen College in 1474, when he made the roof of a tower in the wall opposite the college gate and was paid for roof slates. John Bryan’s connexion with Woodstock is not so happy, and one does not know the end of the story. In a letter which he wrote to the King it appears that he had made a design for the roof of the palace which had been accepted. He thereupon prepared timber for it, only to hear from the Prior of Llanthony that the design should be altered. John Bryan then said that he would alter it if he could be paid £1 which was still owed to him, as the timber had already been used in various offices by other carpenters. The letter suggests that he was a master carpenter in the King’s employment, that he had supplied the wood and needed capital before he could continue.

J. Lysby, carpenter, 1473-84

The whole of Lysby’s work was done apparently for Merton College. In 1473 he made beds and worked on a room for seven days, repaired a low room near the Warden’s parlour, mended a latrine (4 days at 6d.) and was at Holywell (6d.). In 1474/5 he repaired the vestry and in 1476 he made some chamber windows, cut some planks and he and a servant repaired Holywell barn. He and Saunber repaired rooms (4½ days 4s. 3d.) in 1478 and he supplied timber for Aston’s room. In 1478/9 he squared timber and he and a servant made windows for the hall and some rooms (9 days 9s.). He also made St. Leonard’s altar in the chapel and a wheel for a small bell in the tower and hung it.

In the next year he repaired the exchequer (15½ days, 7s. 8½d.) the accountant’s room (2½ days, 15d.) the hall and some rooms and worked in the chapel. He and Hycks, another carpenter, worked for 6 days on the bachelor’s rooms and at Holywell (11s. 6d.) and Lysby repaired the hall there. Lysby and Hycks constructed a roof for the new chancel built by the college at Wolvercote in 1482 and also squared timber, made planks (3s. 9d.) and repaired various rooms (17 days, 7s. 6½d.).

In 1483 he squared wood (18d.) and he and Tybard constructed a gate (4 days at 10d.). They squared wood and built a paling and worked in the accountant’s room (18s. 10d.). In 1484 he and Saunber prepared wood at Cuxham and Eynsham and repaired a cow-house at Holywell. He repaired walls in the Warden's lodge (4 days, 2s.), prepared wood to make ladders, helped Saunder in the accountant's room (11d.) and worked in the Warden's room and the latrines. Lysby's usual rates were 6d. or 5d. according to the season.

K. JOHN WHITE, carpenter, 1474-91

When the chapel and hall were being built at Magdalen College in 1474, John White and his men made apparatus for the masons, with which to carry stone, and they trimmed wood for the scaffold. In 1475/6 he made a latrine at Canterbury College and mended steps to a high room. Between 1478 and 1487 he lived in a house inside the E. gate belonging to St. John's Hospital. John White received 15d. 'pro una pipa ad panes conservandos' (a container in which to keep bread) at Magdalen in 1484/5, was paid 21s. 8d. for making and placing planks in the bursar's room and he was working on the roof of the chapel at Wanborough. He repaired the stable and made a chest for it (6s. 6d.), at the college.

In 1485/6 he and two men worked for 7 days in the bursary, fixed planks in the stableman's room, repaired a pentice above the great doors of the barn (16d.), made a movable bed and was paid 9s. 4d. for various repairs in the chapel and chambers and for 350 feet of wood.

He made an Easter sepulchre (12d.) in 1486/7 and was paid 38s. for carrying elms, iron and other things for the promptuary. He made a movable bed and received 3s. 6d. for making and carrying 'ly frame'. In 1487/8 John White earned 33s. 4d. for carpentry at Horsepath, and at the college he made a bridge leading to the meadow and carried timber for it (13s. 7d.). He also received £3 9s. 1d. for work in the hospital and sold 400 planks for it. In 1490/1 he and Mr. Cosemore, a fellow, rode to Brackley on college business (18d.) and they examined timber at Whateley which was bought for him.

On 11 August 1486 an indenture was made between the Warden of Merton College, Richard FitzJames, and John Fisher, a London joiner, to construct a rood-loft in a place to be arranged. John was to provide foreign wood and the college agreed to find the local timber. Magdalen College rood-loft was to be used as the model for the part from the ground to the lowest part of the coved roof, which was to be 12 feet high with screens (speris) and lintels (lyn­terns) for the 11 altars, but John must make better doors than those at Magdalen. The upper part was to be 5½ feet high on both sides and was to be an improvement on the rood-loft of St. Mildred in the Poultry, London. John Fisher was also to make statues in good timber to cover a frontage of 30 feet, each to be 11 feet high, of characters to be named by the Warden or his representatives. It was to be finished by Michaelmas 1487 and John was to receive £27 in all, £5 at the sealing of the agreement, the rest to be paid at appropriate days as the work progressed; in addition the Warden was to supply meat and drink for John and two or three servants while working in the college. John Fisscher, John Byrche, joiner, and William Petite, wax chandler, citizens of London, bound themselves in £40 worth of goods.51

In 1489/90 Fisher made a new chest for Merton College (2s. 10d.) and in 1490 a door to the chapel room (6d.) and he repaired bachelors' studies (15d.). In 1490/1 John Fisher was employed on important work at Magdalen College, where he was in charge of building an oratory for the President over the new S. walk of the cloister, and received 40s. in part payment of 5 marks.

He made a new bell wheel for the tower at Magdalen in 1491/2 (6s. 10d.) and was called 'sculptor'. He also received 26s. 8d. in full payment of 5 marks for the oratory, carried timber from his house to the College (9d.) and supervised a mason, John Gyll, who made holes in, and cut a door through, the wall of the chapel and took down battlements. In 1494/5 foyscher junior, perhaps his son, made a door for the Founder's tower (20d.). John Fisher himself made a wheel for the first bell in the tower and repaired the third bell (2 days, 8d.). In 1494/5 he also made the woodwork for a new well at Merton College. He made new cupboards for the hall at Magdalen in 1502/3 and worked at Horsepath, and in the same year he ceiled the library at Merton and received £111 plus a reward of 20s. In 1504 he made a grating for a well by the proctor's door at Merton (3d.) and he, his son and John Myles laid a floor (3½ days, 45s. 8d.) in the college.

M. RICHARD BOROW, carpenter, 1490-1511

Richard Borow and two others worked for 13 days at 6d. a day on the new S. walk of the cloister being built at Magdalen in 1490/1, two of his servants were paid for taking down a house near the orchard wall and he built a large gate and a postern, probably for the wall which was being built at the time. In 1491/2 he made movable beds (21d.) and in 1492 he made window frames for Lincoln College and supplied a plank for a drain.

Richard Borow and three men repaired the barn at Magdalen in 1502/3 (2s.) and he and Nicholas Jonys repaired gates near the bridge (4 days, 3s. 4d.). He and another carpenter made tables for the bursary and repaired rooms (20d.), the store house, stables (9s.) and a movable bed and worked in St.

John's chapel. He and others also built a house in Candisshe (i.e. Canditch—the line of the city ditch, Broad St.) during the year.

He repaired a room at Magdalen in 1504/5 and in the next year he and two others helped to demolish the tower of St. John's chapel, at the completion of the new tower (5½ days, 6s. 3d.). In 1506/7 he worked on a house and the Ram Inn, belonging to Lincoln College, made some palings, and repaired a bed, and in 1509/10 he repaired a Lincoln College house, made beds and mended some high walls (15d.), a latrine (3d.) and a table (12d.), worked at Waytt's house, on houses in Church Lane, on the Ram, at Thomas Burstall's house, laid a sleeper and repaired rafters. He also framed two houses before setting them up.

He repaired a room at Magdalen in 1509/10 and mended beds and studies (9d.), and in 1510/11 he was again at Lincoln College and made a door and windows, sawed posts, mended a dovecote (12d.), made a railing (4d.), made a store cupboard for capons and chickens, constructed a bed and repaired some college property.

N. ROBERT CAROW, master carpenter, 1491-1531

Some of the carpenters who worked at Oxford were national figures, but no one was a more important local craftsman than Robert Carow, and more of his work exists intact than that of any other medieval carpenter who fitted woodwork in the colleges.\[^{52}\]

His first appearance was in 1491/2 when he and Thomas Jenkyns were paid for trimming wood at Stow wood for Oriel College. He repaired St. Mary's chapel in St. Mary's church for Oriel in 1493/4 (8d.), and in the same year was working on a new vestry for the Queen's College (10d.) and supplied 7 loads of firewood for the store. In 1494/5 he went over to Shotover to supervise timber for the new tower at Magdalen (4d.), a college which was to employ him in an important capacity consistently until 1524/5. In 1495/6 he fixed cords above the high altar at the same college, on which to hang curtains (8d.) and made two benches for St. John's chapel. He also made a window for a room above the library (4d.), worked on two gable walls in an old building and on another next the kitchen for 15 days at 6d. In this work he was assisted by two servants and received 10d. for planks. Outside he made palings for the far side of the bachelors' garden (8 days at 6d.). In this year also he repaired St. Bartholomew's chapel for Oriel (6s.).

Robert Carow made chests (capsas) to contain a 'Quinquagene Augustinij' given to Magdalen College by Mr. Lacy (3s. 4d.), in 1496/7, and worked for three days stopping up holes at the end of the library roof, and sawyers made rafters for the job (2s. 1d.). He also made other chests in which to keep important documents in the muniment tower (40s.) and he and John Hudson supplied wood for them (3s.). In 1498/9 he supplied timber to Magdalen (20d.) and in the same roll a William Carow is mentioned as selling 'evoys-borde' (6d.). Robert Carow made planks for benches in the hall in 1500/1 and constructed fittings for the kitchen. He made a new louvre for the hall at All Souls in 1501/2.

In 1502/3 he made fittings for windows in the Muniment tower at Magdalen (12d.) and in 1503 he was guarantor for William Patenson, Principal of St. Edmund Hall. His chief work in 1503/4 was at Magdalen, where he was master carpenter of the bell tower; he constructed a new chest to contain valuables (jocalia) (3s. 1d.) supplied timber for the new tower (19s.) and worked on it for 9 days (6s. 8d.). His rate by now was that of a master (8d. a day) and he and three servants did 13 days work on the tower (29s. 3d.) later in the year. He was also commissioned by the College to buy a new 'corea' for the tower, and built some new rooms and repaired one after it had been fitted with a new chimney according to an agreement (11s. 6d.). He and his servant spent 23½ days building a new stable for Magdalen in 1504/5 (42s. 8d.) and they also worked on the bells (6s. 6d.).

In 1505/6 Robert Carow made two wooden crosses to fix against the walls in Magdalen College chapel near the doors (12d.) and there are references to James Lynche, his servant. His servants made a trough for the orchard (7s. 6d.), a movable bed (6d.) and worked on a gate, bridge and paling in the President’s garden (3s. 9d.). Robert also repaired a cross at All Souls (12d.), and sold and carried timber for an All Souls shop (£1 6d.) during the year.

On 29 September 1507 he was renting a house called Grammar Hall at 20s. a year, on a site now occupied by 42 and 43 High Street, from Magdalen College. He lived there at least until 29 September 1511, but by 1516 Robert Pannett, mason, was inhabiting it.

In 1507 Robert Carow leased King’s and Holywell mills from Merton College for £3 3s. annually. He made racks, walls and ladders for the stable at Magdalen in 1507/8 (3s. 3d.), and four of his servants were fitting woodwork in new chambers being built between St. John’s chapel and the new tower. He also trimmed wood at Stow wood for Oriel (4s. 6d.), built a shop and repaired Dr. Reper’s window (£1).

In 1508/9 he did repairs for Magdalen (14s. 6d.), put up a new paling in the orchard (6s.) and also worked on new rooms being built to the E. of the tower. He repaired St. Bartholomew’s Hospital for Oriel in 1510/11 (13s. 4d.)

and in 1512/14 erected Buckley Hall for them (£5 13s. 4d.). He sold boards to Magdalen College in 1512/13 (20d.) and in 1515/16 he made a movable bed (3 days at 6d.), a chest for the wax, and trimmed wood (3s. 6d.) for the same college. He also prepared wood for John Austen’s room (£4 1s. 10d.), his two servants trimmed wood and one made two movable beds, and Carow floored a lower room (3s.). In the same year he did various small jobs for All Souls (5s.). In 1516 as a bailiff he drank with Oriel College officials when rent payments were made.56

In 1516/17 he sawed ‘le grysts’ for Magdalen (3d.), fitted an important new timber structure and squared wood (41s.), but between 1516-18 his most important work was at Corpus Christi College, now being built, where he undertook large contracts from Humphrey Coke; he was master carpenter on the spot there, probably built the similar roof of St. Mary’s College under the same King’s carpenter, and almost certainly framed the roof of the old hall at Tackley’s Inn belonging to Oriel College, c. 1512-14.57 He was a councillor of Oxford from 1516 to 1529 and a bailiff in 1516-26.58

In 1517/18 the Corpus Christi College building account notes that the timber work of the library is to be made by Robert Carow, carpenter, ‘according to a platt made by Humfrey Cooke’.59 He was to find the timber and was to make a board floor, a roof with lead boards to bear lead and joisted to carry a ceiling, doors, windows, partitions and stairs; he was to receive £44 in all with £10 when the document was sealed. Carow gave an estimate for the work saying: ‘the lyberary is in length xx yerdis ij footis and the rooff in compass ix yardis on foote; the summe of yardis ix xxii xij yardis ij foote atte xvjd the yard—xij li. xvijs iiijd’.60 There are several references to contracts made by Robert Carow, but this estimate proves that he worked in a business-like manner and is the only one of its kind so far known in the Oxford archives.

He is mentioned as bailiff in the Oriel accounts of 1518/19 and in the same year trimmed wood for a new bay window erected by him for the Provost’s Lodge at the Queen’s College (26s. 8d.). In 1519/20 Oriel paid him 6s. 8d. ‘per modum composicionum’ and Lincoln College bought two pieces of timber from him (8d.). In 1520/1 he was building the chapel of St. Mary (now called Adam de Brome’s chapel) in St. Mary-the-Virgin for Oriel College (£7 3s., ‘pro edificacione sacelle beate Marie’). On 8 December 1524 there is a reference to a tenement in St. Peter’s in the East, lately in the hands of Robert Carowe. This was Ram Alley and is now 80 High Street.61 He was perhaps living there at the Lay Subsidy of 1524, when he paid 5s. and his two servants, James Lynche and Richard Sclatter, 2s. and 4d. respectively.

1524/5 was a busy year; Mr. Carro received £3 6s. 8d. in complete payment for a new building in the Founder's tower at Magdalen, was paid 46s. 8d. by Oriel College for work at St. Bartholomew's, made some new steps for the Warden's lodge at New College and in particular became warden of the carpenters under Humphrey Coke at Cardinal College and was responsible probably for much of the work on the hall roof. He was paid for 2 days work at Cumnor Wood, the Shawe and Cuddesdon choosing wood, and at another time worked for 7 days at 6d.

On 19 September 1525 he sent in a bill for repairs to the South (Folly) Bridge in Oxford. His work at St. Bartholomew's had been the ceiling of the roof of the chapel, which he completed in 1525/6 (£1). He continued to work at Cardinal College in 1528/9 and prepared 11,250 boards and stored them at the Almshouse and Gloucester College at 12d. a hundred (112s. 6d.). In 1529 he signed a petition presented by various townsmen to stop quarrels between the town and the university and showed a literacy already suggested by the estimate given for the Corpus roof.

He died after a long illness c. April 1531 and an inventory of his property made at that time gives a good idea of the possessions of a carpenter. The instruments of his trade included 5 chisels, a compass and two augers, a gouge, an old chipping axe, 2 drawing planes, 13 small planes, 2 adzes, a hand saw, a drawer and 7 small planes, a square, a hammer, a 'wymbell', 4 boxes, 2 prickers, a knife and a compass. The other items are chiefly of a domestic character. He had probably lived in his last years in a tenement of St. Frideswide's and was buried in Our Lady's chapel in St. Peter's church.

The first noteworthy work by Robert Carow of which there is visual record was an exceptionally fine louvre made for All Souls College hall in 1501/2, which Loggan shows to have been octagonal, with battlements, and surmounted by a flag vane, and which was destroyed with the hall in 1729. His next important work was in Tackley's Inn, also called Buckley Hall, for Oriel College in 1512-14, where he perhaps constructed the roof. W. A. Pantin has described the roof of the hall in detail and illustrated it, but says that it is of a conservative fifteenth century type, and other authorities support this view.

It has ‘collar beam trusses and moulded braces forming two-centred arches; there are curved wind braces’. However the college records would appear to prove that Carow framed it, for the reference to his work is the only one in the period after 1451, other than some repairs in 1480/1.

The roofs over the halls at Corpus Christi (pl. x) and Christ Church (pl. xi) and possibly that now in Brasenose chapel, above the plaster vault, brought there from St. Mary’s College, all probably designed by Humphrey Coke, but mainly constructed by Robert Carow, were of the hammer beam type and the finest in Oxford. It is not known what the new building fitted into the Founder’s tower at Magdalen in 1524/5 was, and the staircase in the Warden’s lodge at New College has been replaced by a seventeenth century one. The ceiling in St. Bartholomew’s chapel at Cowley still remains however and, like that at Tackley’s Inn, is of a fifteenth century type, with chamfered tie beams, curved braces, purlins and rafters and a moulded and embattled wall plate.

It appears that when Carow was responsible for the design he used older models, and that it is only when working in conjunction with Coke that he constructed roofs of an advanced design. Much of the timberwork made by him, of a more unobtrusive type, exists in the tower and other buildings at Magdalen College.

O. THOMAS WALSHE, carpenter, 1495-1506

Thomas Walshe worked only at Magdalen College, but he did such a volume of jobs there that he may have had a contract. In 1495/6 he worked on a well in the kitchen garden for three days (18d.), repaired a door from the cloister to the orchard (6d.) and a big bridge in the meadow (4s.) and made a wheel barrow (12d.). He worked on studies (2½ days at 5d.) and in company with John Miles he made windows and other fittings for Dr. Goff’s room (12d.) and three pairs of rails for chamber stairs (3s.).

He worked for 1½ days on a clock housing in St. John’s chapel (9d.) in 1496/7, made two beds for the almshouse, mended hall fittings, did jobs in the pantry, fitted shelves in the kitchen, stopped up holes in stairs and repaired some beds (3s.). Thomas Walshe also put up various signs of the cross in different places (9d.) and made 4 studs for them (6d.) and repaired various screens (by parclose) and more beds (25½d.).

In 1498/9 Walshe cut wood (3s.), supplied 8 studs (16d.), made 3 doors (5s.), was paid for 18 studs and repaired a door by the stable (2s. 3½d.) ; he also made 100 planks for beds. He and a servant made two screens in St. John’s chapel in 1502/3 (9s. 2d.) and in 1503/4 worked with Robert Carow on the new tower (12d.) and repaired various rooms. In 1504/5 he made a desk for the chapel (12d.) and a cradle for men who were whitewashing the chapel, made a chest for the pantry and a cupboard for the kitchen (1s. 6d.) and repaired many rooms (7s.) and the pump (6d.). He was working on desks in the chapel (12d.) in 1505/6, repaired trestles and forms in the hall, mended desks and forms and a window in the music school, made racks and repaired a wall between the kitchen and the music school (2s.), made a bin for the President’s lodge, repaired windows in the barber’s room, made a cover for the clock in the new tower (18d.) and did much work in rooms.

P. HUMPHREY COKE, master carpenter, 1496-1531

Humphrey Coke, master carpenter of Corpus Christi and Cardinal Colleges was a London man and is first mentioned on 16 March 1496, when he was member of a commission to impress craftsmen for defensive work on the Scottish border.69 On 23 November 1499 he was appointed master carpenter of Berwick-on-Tweed,70 and between 1506 and 1510 was Warden of the carpenter’s company in London,71 having become a freeman of the company in 1504.72 In 1509 he was keeper of Durham Place, bailiff of Durham rents in Middlesex and master of the bridge house.73 In 1510/11 he was paid £12 6s. 8d. for various unspecified duties and 6s. 8d. for drawing a plan for Eton College cloister, the erection of which was completed by 1513/14, when he was paid £13 6s. 8d. for his work.74

By 1512 he had become master carpenter at the building of Corpus Christi College at Oxford at a rate of 1s. 8d. a day and in that year he and the master masons, William Vertue and William East, were assaulted by two men who were probably encouraged by two fellows of Brasenose Hall. Brasenose College was being built at the same time perhaps by local craftsmen who objected to the ‘foreigners’ from London in charge at the rival college. The Corpus Christi College building accounts recorded in 1517/18 that Robert Carow was to make the timber work of the library according to a design drawn by Humphrey Coke75 and, in 1517 also, the latter contracted with Roger Morwent to make a bench for the Master’s parlour 18 feet long, to panel between the windows, to make two doorways, one in the parlour and one in the room above, two cupboards one above the other, 5 feet high and 20 inches broad, to ceil the parlour roof, to make a door at the bottom of the stairs; the college was to find the material and he was to have £5 for his work.76 He continued as master carpenter here until 1518 and designed the roof of the hall and probably also the roof of St. Mary’s College, Oxford.77

He was still master carpenter at Berwick in 1515, when his wages there were 12d. a day. In 1516/17 he designed woodwork for buildings on the W. of the cloister court and Lupton's tower at Eton, and was associated with William Vertue and Henry Redman. In 1517 he was dealing with impressment money, and on the death of Richard Russell became Wolsey's carpenter and was chief carpenter at the Savoy Hospital.

In 1519 he was appointed the King's chief carpenter at 12d. a day, and again became Warden of the carpenters company. In 1520 impressment money to the value of £30 was delivered to him, and he and William Vertue prepared for the Field of the Cloth of Gold. In 1522 he was still keeper of the Bishop of Durham's rents in the Strand. George Lawson succeeded him as master carpenter at Berwick in 1524. He was master carpenter at Cardinal College from 1526-9 and a letter of 29 December 1526 commends his diligence. The great roof of the hall (PL. X) was probably designed by him, but it is so singular that there is only one reference to him as working at Cardinal College, that one may suppose that Robert Carow really did most of the work there.

In 1526 he received wages of £18 5s. as a member of the Royal Household. He died on 18 March 1531 and was buried in the Savoy Chapel and on 24 March James Needham was appointed to succeed him. His will has been printed by John Harvey and mentions his eldest son Roger, who was a leading carpenter at York Place in 1515 at 7d. a day, and his daughter Christine who married John Russell, son of Richard Russell, Wolsey's carpenter until his death in 1517, and chief carpenter to the King in 1532.

The hammer-beam roofs designed by Humphrey Coke are perhaps the best wooden ones at Oxford. That over Corpus Christi Hall (PL. X) is very fine; its wall pieces rest on corbels almost all sculptured with 'est deo gratia' and two of them have 'Sancti Swithini' and the arms of Winchester impaling Foxe. Under the outer ends of the hammer beams are richly carved pendants of tabernacle type and above the wall plate, at the level of the hammer beams, is a cornice of shields and quatrefoils. It is a simpler form of the one (PL. XI) built by Humphrey Coke and Robert Carow at Cardinal College and the main constructional details are the same, but this roof is steeper pitched and has true wind braces instead of four-centred arches placed longitudinally between the outer ends of the hammer beams. The roof at Cardinal College is dated 1529 in two places, was designed by Humphrey Coke and constructed by Robert Carow and carved by W. Okay. It was built by contract and the final cost is not known but £102 3s. 4d. was spent in 1528 for carving it. It has a span of almost 40 feet and its peculiar features are perhaps the four-centred arches which connect the trusses at the end of the hammer beams, such as are seen in Hugh Herland's great roof at Westminster Hall, erected over 100 years before.

Q. JAMES LYNCHÉ, carpenter, 1504-25

James Lynche was servant to the master carpenter Robert Carow so it is therefore to be expected that much of his work was done at Magdalen College. In 1504/5 James the servant of Carow worked for 4 days at 6d. on the new stable and in 1505/6 he and another of Carow's servants cut wood for planks (4s.), and he worked on the clock for 2½ days (15d.) and repaired a room (3s. 3d.). He made a movable bed and a 'pixidium' in 1507/8 (2s. 6d.), and in 1509/10 he fixed up parchment tables in the chapel (8d.), repaired a door in the President's lodge (6d.), put up window frames in the President's room (3d.), worked on a cupboard in the pantry, spent 7 days making tables and doors for the kitchen (2s. 11d.) and mended rails in the stable. James Lynche also made a bed for the Vice-President's room and fitted boards in various rooms.

He made a latrine (foricas) at Magdalen (3s. 6d.) in 1512/13 and in 1515/16 he and John Philipps repaired the table (18d.) and repaired a door near the main gate (4½ days at 6d.). James Lynche made palings for Oxford property belonging to Merton College in 1521/2, and in 1522/3 he and John Philipps squared wood and sawed 300 oak planks for making studies at New College (3s.). In 1524/5 he made a bookshelf for the N. chapel in Merton College chapel (2s. 3d.). He was still Robert Carow's servant at the Lay Subsidy of 1524, when he paid 4d., and Carow owed him 3s. 6d. in wages at his death.

R. JOHN PHILIPPS, carpenter, 1505-25

John Philipps was a carpenter who seems to have had a permanent connection perhaps in the form of a contract with New College, for he was employed consistently from 1505 until 1524 on their work in and out of Oxford. He was working busily at New College in 1505/6; in the kitchen he made a new table and cut and shaped wood for 10d. and mended two chests in which the plates were kept. He laid planks in the new library for one day (6d.), repaired a cupboard and made a 'pentyss' in the Warden's house (6d.). The door of Mr. Wyllys study was repaired and a window made by him (1½ days, 7½d.); he made a setting for the clock in the bell tower and a door for a room at the E. end of the kitchen, and he fixed into position a lock made by George Smyth for the outer door of the garden. He made and fitted three doors for the monument tower, and one for the Warden's tower; the book carrier's room had a new window, while a study in the tower was repaired (3½ days at 6d.). In the same year he and his man spent 5 days cutting timber and he repaired another study.

In 1509/10 he is only mentioned as repairing a bed. John Philipps next appears in 1511/12 when he made seats for the choir boys for three days (12d.). He spent two days repairing forms and trestles (12d.) and later he and his man were paid 3s. for 6 days work in the cook's room and the kitchen, on the door of the cellar and a chest in the nave of the chapel. He also made palings by the kitchen door and other palings in the garden. In 1515/16 he and James Lynche repaired Magdalen College stable (18d.) and made a door near the main gate (4½ 6d.). No further work by him is recorded at New College until 1518/19, when he was paid 3s. 9d. for 5½ days work 'pro planacione et factura sex chalorum'. He then supplied two planks for a drain and made holes to fix them (6d.). He repaired fittings in the stable, fixed a table 'in cursaria ubi reponient rotuli', repaired a bed and made candlesticks (5 days at 6d.). Next he spent 8 days making a doorway leading to the well and 11 days on fittings in the chapel and vestry (5s. 6d.). He was at Godstow with Richard Stawnton, tiler, supervising the building of a house and helped Wastell, another carpenter, with its roof.

In 1522/3 he worked for four days making a case for the organ, for 7½ days removing the matins bell, and for three days on the tower windows, always at 6d. a day and he was paid 12d. for planks. John Philipps provided 8 feet of oak and made a book-shelf in the Warden's room (3½ days, 21d.). He also provided planks with which he repaired the Warden's stairs and then made railings (10d.) for the hall. Next he was squaring wood with Lynche, Carow's servant, and sawed 300 oak planks with him in 3 days (3s.). He repaired windows in Mr. Sebone's study and put a post under a gate near St. Peter's church. In 1524/5 he made a new chair for the Warden's use in chapel (6d.), an altar table for a new chapel (3 days at 6d.) and repaired a study. He worked for 7 days (3s. 9d.) making the steps of an altar in the N. chapel, provided oak planks and repaired other steps. The last job which John Philipps seems to have performed was to roof a house at Headington in the same year. In this year he was living in St. Peter's in the East and paid 12d. at the Lay Subsidy. He may have been related to a carpenter of the same name who worked for New College from 1476 to 1480.

Richard Pytfyn, sawyer, 1505-30

Richard Pytfyn was the most noteworthy sawyer working in Oxford in the early sixteenth century and, while doing little carpentry himself, prepared wood for most of the important carpenters of the period. He was working at Lincoln College as early as 1505/6 and in 1506/7 he made some railings there (3 days at 6d.) and sawed planks and groundsels (11 days, 5s. 6d.). In 1507/8 he was working at the erection of chambers between St. John’s chapel and the new tower at Magdalen and in the next year sawed planks for other rooms being built to the E. of the tower. In 1508/9 also he made rafters and principals for Lincoln College and worked at Long Combe.

He prepared planks at Magdalen in 1509/10 (6s. 6d.) and then there is a gap in his career until 1516/17 when he sawed boards for the same college (18s. 6d.). He made wainscots for Magdalen in 1518/19 (18d.) and with a mate sawed wood (8 days at 6d.) and made 20 ‘scodes’ for a new roof being fitted to Whaddon church chancel for New College (3s. 4d.). Pytfyn was sawing wood at Lincoln College in 1520/1 but by far the greatest amount of his work was at Magdalen. He prepared wood for the panelling (12d.), two doors (9d.) and wainscots (14d.) for the hall and sawed 270 feet of wood for the carver working there (3s. 9d.). He spent two periods preparing timber for the President’s lodge extension (8s. and 15s.). The second payment includes his work with two servants sawing over 374 feet of wood and making rafters and braces. He made ‘quaterbord’ and sawed wood for steps to the cook’s room, chopped wood for fuel and sawed rafters for a rectory at Horsepath.

In 1521 he worked in Studley Wood and in Magdalen College and prepared a very large amount of wainscots and ‘battelys’ and ‘Kerses’ for the President’s lodge. He cut up wood at Tingewick for New College (47s. 8d.) in 1522/3 and in 1523 he and his servant sawed timber for Merton College (15 days at 12d.). At the Lay Subsidy of 1524 he was living in St. Mary Magdalen parish and paid 2s. He made planks for a Magdalen chamber in 1525/6 (5s. 5d.) and shaped wood for a mould for the Easter candle, and in 1526/7 sawed groundsels and rails for new stalls for St. John’s chapel (8s.), and prepared timber for the store. In 1529/30 he made planks for a bridge at Magdalen.

Cornelius Clerke, carpenter, 1506-26

Cornelius Clerke was one of the more important Oxford carpenters in the early sixteenth century and was also known as Cornelius Carpenter, Cornell Clerke and Cornell during his working career.

OXFORD CARPENTERS, 1370-1530

Cornelius made 4 lattices for windows in Magdalen chapel tower (the muniment tower) in 1506/7, made holes in St. John's chapel (1 1/2 days, 9d.), made a lattice for the President's buttery (8d.), one for the President's staircase, (11d.), worked on racks in the stable, made a paling in the President's garden (3 days, 18d.), repaired bell wheels (2 1/2 days, 15d.), and mended windows (12d.) On 29 September 1507 he lived in a tenement belonging to St. John's Hospital inside the E. gate.100 In 1507/8 he worked on windows in the vestry at Magdalen (5d.), made a lattice for a window near the buttery (11d.), worked on the President's buttery and garden, made a cupboard (3s. 4d.) and a lattice for the lower kitchen (16d.), repaired rooms (3s. 11d.) and was engaged on the building of chambers between the new tower and St. John's chapel. He was dwelling in another house belonging to St. John's Hospital in St. Peter's in the East in 1516.101

In March 1517 an agreement is entered in the Corpus Christi College accounts as follows: 'Memorandum convenanted and agreed wyth Cornell Clerke ffor the makyng off the dextis in the libery to the summe off xvj and after the manner and florome as they be in Magdaleyn College, except the popie heedis off the scitis. Thes to be workmanly wrowght and clenly and we to have all maner off stoof ffond hyme and to have ffors the makyng off on dexte xs, the some of the hole viij li.'102 This is the first contract for Cornelius noted in college accounts.

In 1520/1 Cornelius repaired the tower door at Magdalen (8d.), his servants made a dressing board for the kitchen and they made an 'area' in a room (5s. 3d.). The chief work at Magdalen during this period was the erection of an extension to the President's lodge for which Cornelius was chief carpenter in 1520/1. At first he was preparing the fabric of the building but later he made the staircase and his servants made stair rails and fitted 'drawing boards' above a window. He and his men worked for about 70 days and earned £4 17s. 11 1/2d. This extension later known as the Gallery or Election chamber was pulled down in 1770.

He was living in a house belonging to St. John's Hospital in St. Peter's in the East in 1521.103 It appears that each of the houses mentioned was a different one as each time he is the in-going tenant. In 1521/2 he mended chapel vessels at Magdalen and in 1524, as Cornelius Clerck, paid 4d. Lay Subsidy and lived in the parish of St. Peter's in the East.104 Cornelius made a hand-rail for some Magdalen chamber stairs in 1525/6 (8d.).

The library desks at Corpus still exist in an altered form, with the ball finials to the seats, so carefully stipulated instead of popey heads, a concession to the dawning of classical influence.

U. WILLIAM CAXTON, carpenter, 1511-30

William Caxton did most of his work at Magdalen, where he is first mentioned as making a movable bed in 1511/12, and he supplied a rope for the clock (11d.) in 1518/19. In 1520/1 he and his servant repaired benches in the hall (2 days, 20d.), made a paling by the garden entrance (3s. 9d.) and in the orchard he and two servants made a sluice by the mill (6s. 9d.). He supplied a rope for the second bell (2s.), cut down 12 elms and sawed them up, worked with his servant in Mr. Hedge’s room (10d.) and made 4 beds (one truckle bed (15d.) two standing ones (4s. 6d.) and one not described (3s. 6d.). He made wheelbarrows, stairs to the cook’s room (3s.), a trap ‘et forcibus’ for a room and repaired another room. He and two servants took down the old gallery (18d.) and he sawed wood for the new extension of the President’s lodge (3s.). He worked for two days sawing ‘ly nistys et lede lathys’ for the hall (9s. 9d.), supplied 12 fathom of ropes (4d.) and his servants worked on the Grammar Hall. He and his servants also repaired Horsepath rectory.

In 1521/2 Caxton mended a gutter at Horsepath (1½ days, 9d.), made a door for the college promptuary (6d.), fixed and strengthened joists in the new building (the Gallery), did planking work in the stable (5d.), prepared firewood and timber from Studley for the store, supplied a bell rope (17 pounds at 2d.), made a railing by the meadow gate (6d.), mended the side of a ladder and various rooms (9s. 9d.) and worked on the E. gate of the town (2s. 6d.).

William Caxton made a door in the President’s lodge in 1524/5 (2s.), repaired a bridge in the E. part of the garden (18d.), made a paling in the moat, sawed planks for the store and repaired various rooms and beds (12s. 5d.). He also mended the great W. gate (3d.) and worked on the new extension to the President’s lodge, supplying ropes for lifting stones, and wood for beams and he sawed wood (34s. 6d.). He prepared planks for a bridge at the end of the Walks worked in St. John’s Wood and supplied ridge trees (duobus rygtres). He provided timber for repairs in Oriel College (5s. 8d.) in 1524/5 also, and he and his servant built a larder there (1s. 11d.).

In 1525/6 he and his servant squared elms at Magdalen (5½ days, 5s.) and made fittings for chapel altars (10d.). He supplied ropes for the second and tenor bells, repaired the ceiling in St. John’s chapel (3d.), mended tables and benches in the hall (20d.), made a table and bench for the pantry, repaired a door, seat and small table, fitted a new door in the exchequer (scaccarium) (8d.) and repaired benches in the library (10d.). He made a cupboard door in the kitchen (2d.), put up railings to prevent the horses coming into the garden (18d.) and constructed a bridge in the meadow, with the help of two of his apprentices. He repaired various rooms and beds (16s. 7d.) and another bridge leading to the field and a gate near it (6d.). Caxton and two others cut up wood for carting, for Oriel (3s. 9d.), in the same year and worked in a room there (1s.).

He supplied a rope for drawing and withdrawing hangings of the high altar of Magdalen chapel in 1526/7 (4s.), provided 6 pieces of wood bought in All Saints parish, for new stalls for St. John’s chapel (10s. 9d.), worked in the President’s lodge (2 days at 6d. plus servants, 22d.), repaired the stable 2s. 1½d.), prepared wood for the store, made wheelbarrows (2s.) and sawed and squared much timber (9s. 3d.). He made ‘ uno ly dray’ (12d.), a pentice in the clerks’ cloister (10d.), worked in the ‘ ludus preceptorum’ (5d.), made racks (5d.) and repaired the fuel house (4s. 6d.) He worked in the doctors’ garden, on rooms, on the small orchard gate and repaired a lamp (2½d.).

William Caxton sawed wood for Lincoln College in 1527/8 and worked at Iffley and Long Combe, and in 1528/9 he was again repairing Lincoln College property at Iffley. In 1529/30 he cut down trees at Tubney for Magdalen and his servant made a door for the college storehouse (2s. 9d.). He did work in the President’s lodge and received 9s. 9d. for various jobs. He and Wotton built a house by agreement (£3), and he sawed wood, mended gratings and repaired the bridges. He and Wotton built a room above the kitchen (27s. 4d.) and another house and he made 9 desks at the back of the President’s seat in the chapel. He prepared much wood, made a door and worked in a new room (12d.), received 6s. 10d. for two bell ropes and did various jobs in the bell tower (9s. 9d.).

He and two others were working for Lincoln College in this year and he also prepared wood for New College. It is interesting to note that William Caxton, while an active carpenter, was also a dealer in rope.

V. ROBERT BOYS, CARPENTER, 1511-14

Robert Boys worked in the President’s kitchen at Magdalen in 1511/12 (18d.), made a frame for the clock (wache) (with another man, 12 days, 7s. 11d.), he and others worked in the stable (3 days, 3s.) and he received 2s. 6d. for various jobs. In 1512/13 he repaired tables in the hall (1½ days at 9d. a day), put up sticks for vines in the President’s garden and repaired the kitchen door and pantry (3 days, 2s. 6d.). He made 3 lattices 10 feet square at 2½d. a foot (2s. 1d.). Boys and two servants put the weight on the clock (3 days, 25. 9d.) and with a boy he removed it from the upper chamber of the tower to a lower one (2½ days at 10d.) ; he and his servant worked in the kitchen and in Mr. Elston’s room.
E. A. GEE

He repaired forms in St. John’s chapel in 1513/14 and with his servant made a paling for the hall (4 days, 4s.). He removed fittings from the upper room of the bell tower, made 3 beds and repaired belfry windows (9½ days at 5d.). He made a movable bed, repaired the kitchen, constructed a ladder and some hall trestles and worked on the kitchen well (2s. 4d.). Apart from making a pump his other work at Magdalen was concerned with chambers. In this year also he worked at the White Hart, an inn belonging to Lincoln College, and made some beams. In 1511 he was living in a house in St. Peter’s in the East belonging to St. John’s Hospital. 105

W. ROBERT CLARKE, carver, 1516-21

Robert Clarke must have been an important figure in Oxford and it is a pity that not more is known of him. In 1516/17 he received 4d. as earnest for making presses for the Queen’s College library. For these he charged 40s., plus 33½d. for glue and nails, locks, hinges and rings, and 2s. 6d. for fitting these to the presses. He also prepared timber (8d.) and made two chests for the chapel (7s.).

In 1518/19 300 planks were carried from his house to New College for a new roof being fitted over Whaddon church chancel and he made wainscot, carved knots and flowers (5s. 4d.), supplied glue (4d.) and received 36s. 8d. in part payment. He was engaged by Magdalen in 1520/1 and was in charge of fitting a great deal of woodwork in the hall; there is no specific reference to its character, but it seems possible that the first panelling was now installed. Robert did carving work at 8d. a day for 67 days over about 14 weeks, with his three servants, Hugh, Giles and John. Large quantities of wood were prepared and various items were bought for the work including large quantities of glue and taket nails and two pounds of black colouring (16d.). The work cost in all £8 0s. 2½d. and would appear to have been wainscoting or screen work, for so much glue could hardly have been used in a roof and the ceiling had only been completed in 1518/19.

He was perhaps a relative of Cornelius Clerke, carpenter, for at the Lay Subsidy of 1524 Robert Clerck paid 4d., when living in the parish of St. Peter in the East, and his name occurs immediately in front of that of Cornelius. 106 If this is so the Queen’s College presses and those of Corpus Christi College may have come from the same workshop.

X. THOMAS CAXTON, sawyer, 1520-30

Thomas Caxton sawed 200 feet of timber for carvers constructing panelling in Magdalen hall in 1520/1 (2s.), prepared other timber (1s. 5d.), and with a mate sawed wood for the extension to the President’s lodge (5½ days, 6s.6d.). In 1521/2 he and a servant prepared wood for new chapel stalls (12d.) and for room repairs (2s.) at the same college. He was at work at Cardinal College in 1524/5 and in 1525/6 he and his servant sawed wood for the store at Magdalen and prepared oak boards and planks for a new bridge in the meadow. He and another sawed wood for new stalls for St. John’s chapel (3½ days at 6d. and 400 feet, 4s.), he prepared some studs in 1526/7 and in 1529/30 he received 3s. 4d. ‘pro ly slyttyng of walle platts, gysers and wyndbemys and overcuppyl apud Hedyngton’.

Y. JOHN DE COLONIA, carpenter, 1521-5

John de Colonia was most probably a German craftsman from Cologne and first appears in 1521/2 when he made new stalls for Magdalen College chapel, assisted by three servants. He worked for 19 days (40s.) and supplied 12d. worth of glue. There were 22 stalls in all, with canopies and panelled backs, and misericords (pl. xii) ; the panels were painted with figures of saints in Frewen’s time. During the drastic restorations of 1831/2 Cottingham removed all the old timber except the seats, because it did not fit in with the new woodwork, and Aymer Vallance gives a good account of its dispersal. John de Colonia also made 89 yards of ceiling at 10d. a yard (£3 16s. 8d. plus glue 3s. 4d.). This was probably fixed to the under side of the chapel roof. He and two servants repaired various chests and made 5 tables with trestles for chambers (2od.). He worked on the new extension to the President’s lodge for 18 days at 8d., usually with two servants, received 8d. for green paper for a new ‘abacus’ and 8d. for sawing wainscot for it, made a wardrobe (vestiarum) in Dr. Byshopp’s room (2s.) and worked for 2 days in another room (2s. 8d.).

In 1524/5 his servants worked for two days on a door to keep out those coming to the buttery for wine (2s. 3d.) and he was paid for planks. In 1523 he was living in a house in St. Peter’s in the East, belonging to St. John’s Hospital, and which previously had been inhabited by Robert Carow and Robert Pannett, mason, and he lived there as late as 1526.

Z. JOHN SKOWTE, carver, 1525-7

John Skowte made a mould to cast the Easter candle for Magdalen College according to an agreement in 1525-6 (13s. 4d.), and carved the foot of the candlestick standing in the choir (16 days at 8d. plus servant, 17s. 6d.). He also made a mould to produce flowers (10d.) and repaired windows in a chamber (2 days, 16d.). In 1526/7 he made 12 'ly stousis' (4s.), repaired stalls in the chapel for a day or more, made two more 'ly stousis' (16d.) and 'ly judas' (4d.) and repaired desks. With many assistants he worked for 10 weeks at 8d. a day making new stalls for St. John's chapel which cost £7 10s. 8d., and John received an additional 2s. 8d. for carving 4 popey heads according to an agreement. He supplied 200 feet of planks, at 8s. a hundred feet, for desks and 12 feet at 2d. He also sawed wood for the store, worked in various rooms and always at 8d. a day. He worked on a new organ for one day, made leads for the President’s upper room, each window leaded costing 16d. (16s.), constructed a chair (2s. 8d.) a bed (16d.) and a new bed for the President. In 1529/30 John Showt made a new organ for Magdalen and is noted by a writer on the organ as a London man and possibly a German. It is possible that John de Colonia and John Skowte were one and the same man.

APPENDIX I

CARPENTERS EMPLOYED BY COLLEGES, LISTED IN CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER

The capital letter in brackets after a name indicates the position of the carpenter’s biography above (pp. 00-00).
The dates given for each entry indicate the inclusive dates when the carpenter in question is known to have worked for the college.

ALL SOULS COLLEGE

II. Carpenter, William. 1437–40. Carpenter of Croydon; given 12d. expenses in 4th wk. of May 1437, when he went with John Druell to see wood at Eynsham. In 1438/9 worked in 5th wk. of Jan. for 2s. 6d. and received 3s. for a wk. in May. Appeared again in next year and given 20d. as reward in 5th wk. of Oct. Working in the college in 3rd wk. of Nov. and then apparently does not appear again. Possibly warden of the carpenters under John Branche (only justification for statement being that he worked more than the other carpenters named).

III. Apprentice to John Branche. 1438/9. (See under John Branche.)

IV. Nicholl, John. 1438/9. Carpenter; worked in 5th wk. of Jan. (2s. 6d.).

Edward J. Hopkins, The Organ, etc. (London, 1855).

The colleges included in this list are: All Souls (p. 144), Cardinal (p. 148), Lincoln (p. 149), Magdalen (p. 152), Merton (p. 159), New College (p. 164), Oriel (p. 167), Queens (p. 169).

Nos. 1-XX worked at the initial building of the college.
Oxford Carpenters, 1370-1530

v. Sawyere, Walter. 1438/9. Sawyer; two sawyers worked from the beginning but Walter Sawyere is first mentioned in 4th wk. of Nov. and cut 200 ft. of wood (2s. 8d.). In 1st wk. of Dec. sawed 400 ft. (5s. 4d.), in next wk. 200 ft. (2s. 8d.) and in 3rd wk. 400 ft. of planks and 100 ft. of timber (6s. 4d.).

vi. Lyons, Robert. 1439/40. Carpenter; received 6d. at Christmas as expenses for a journey.

viii. Bate, William. 1439-41. Joiner; worked for 6 days at 6d. in 1st wk. of Aug., for 2 wks. in Mar. and then some wks. from July to Oct., often with William Kyrkeby and always at 6d. a day.

ix. Sawdric, Richard. 1439-41. Carver; came to the college in Richard Tylloc's absence for 2 wks. of Oct. and 1 of Nov. 1439/40 and had as many as four men. In 1440/1 was at Oxford in 1st wk. of Jan., 4 wks. of Mar. and 2 of April. His rate was 3s. 4d. a wk.

xii. Mede, William. 1439-42. Carpenter; worked for 2 days at 6d. in 1st wk. of May 1439/40 and 5 days at 5d. in 1441/2.

xiii. Barbor, John. 1440/1. Joiner; worked for 5 days at 6d. in 4th wk. of Aug. and 1 day of 3rd wk. of Sept.

xvi. Kyrkeby, William. 1440/1. Joiner; worked for some wks. from July to Sept., usually at 3s. 4d. a wk., including his boy's wages.

E. A. GEE

xxiv. White, Richard. 1448-56. Carpenter; paid 2s. 3d. for himself and servants working in kitchen in 1448/9 and moved timber (8d.) in 1451/2. Was engaged on repairs outside college at Michael Hall and Nicholas Robyn's house in 1455/6. On 27 June 1458 was informed in the Chancellor's court that he would be fined if he touched Joan Tysyn and if he did he should marry her and pay a fine of 20s. (Reg. Canc., ii, 23).

xxv. Mayow, Robert. 1449/50. Carpenter; paid £7 for constructing chancel roof at Upchurch.

xxvi. Sawyer, William. 1449-57. Sawyer; of Headington; supplier of firewood. Sold 10 oaks for firewood (20s.) on 20 October 1449/50 and on 13 May 1451/2 was paid 18s. for firewood and its carriage. In 1455/6 and 1456/7 cut wood for fuel.

xxvii. Dalton, John. 1449-58. Carpenter; he and mate worked on Matthew's house in Le Bayly in 1449/50 and on Nicholas Robyn's house in 1455/6. In 1457/8 was paid 174d. for planks and for making hatch in promptuary door and he and servant were sawing wood for Michael Hall. There is interesting record of lease granted him for life on 25 March 1450 by Oseney Abbey, of a corner tenement in the Hamel. He was to build a new house over the running water, 36 ft. long and 14 ft. wide and full details of its rooms are given. Continued to inhabit this house between 1453 and 1462 (Oseney Cart., ii, 422, 423, iii, 271). In 1452 was surety for John Angell, carpenter, in Chancellor's court (Reg. Canc., i, 282).

xxviii. Bladon, John. 1450/1. Sawyer; he and son paid 3s. for 3 days work cutting wood into planks.

xxix. Ffetherston, William. 1450/1. Carpenter; repaired promptuary door in 1450/1 for 9d. Made cupboard for 3s. 6d. working for 7 days at 6d. and his servant received 20d. On 10 Feb. he fixed a rack. He and servant paid 5s. 6d. for repairing walls in Warden's room. On 8 Oct. 1450 John a Vicary promised to keep the peace with William Fedurstone and wife (Reg. Canc., i, 219), and on 18 Nov. William was brought before Chancellor's court as owing 9s. 8d. which he promised to pay (Ibid., i, 223). On 7 Apr. 1451 he and friend asked to act as arbitrators in a case (Ibid., i, 234), and on 9 July 1451 Thomas Smith alias Drayton promised to pay debt of 3s. 4d. to Patric Carpenter for William Fedurstone (Ibid., i, 243). On 29 July 1451 William's wife Emmota appointed Matthew Gryffen her attorney and a little later William Fedurstone and Thomas Smith alias Drayton, in court, confessed that when wardens of St. Peter's in the East they had sold a house by the E. gate, belonging to the church, to Sir Thomas Charlton, and the sale was cancelled (Ibid., i, 311).

xxx. Been, William. 1451/2. Sawyer; did much work in college.

xxxi. Ffolan, Philip. 1451/2. Sawyer; mentioned many times.

xxxi. Gryffyth, Hugh. 1451/2. Sawyer; he and mate sawing wood.

xxxiii. Aesche, Philip. 1451-6. Carpenter; working with his man in college in 1451/2 and put up weather vane at Chipping Norton. In 1452/3 was working at Grampound and cutting wood in college in 1455/6.
XXXIV. Asch, William. 1451-3. Carpenter; probably relative of Philip, received 3s. 2d. for working with 2 men trimming wood, and on stable on 19 Aug. 1451/2. In next year made palings at Little Balliol and cut wood in college. On 28 May 1452 was Commissary for Chancellor's court (Reg. Canc., 1, 265).

XXXV. Carpenter, Michael. 1452/3. Carpenter; worked in St. Mary Magdalen parish.

XXXVI. Pawes, John. 1452-6. Sawyer; worked outside college in 1452/3. In 1455/6 sawed wood in college and for Michael Hall. Lived in cottage in St. George's parish between 1454 and 1463, and until 1477 in another house in the same parish, both belonging to Oseney (Oseney Cart., III, 272/3). On 20 July 1459 was surety for William Robyns of Botley, who had struck a friar, and on 8 Feb. was mentioned in case in Chancellor's court (Reg. Canc., 11, 26, 74).

XXXVII. Warde, John. 1452/3. Sawyer; he and mate working in college.

XXXVIII. Bodwyn (Bedewyn), Richard. 1455-7. Carpenter; supplied 300 nails for 2 lattices for bursar's room in 1455/6 and worked for 3 days making lattices on 29 Sept.; also made door for house in St. Ebbe's and carried pair of trestles and table to bursary. In 1456/7 repaired brewhouse in college and did some repairs in St. Mary Magdalen parish. In 1453/8 was occupant of cottage in St. Peter's in the Bailey, belonging to Oseney (Oseney Cart., III, 263). In 1450 a Richard Bedwyn baker is mentioned in Chancellor's Register (Reg. Canc., 1, 220).

XXXIX. Carpenter, John. 1455/6. Carpenter; cutting up wood in college.

XLI. Sawyer (Hewlyn), Oliver. 1456/7. Sawyer; sawing planks for outside repairs. Lived in house in St. George's parish owned by Oseney (Oseney Cart., III, 271).

NEW COLLEGE

IV. Phylipps. 1392–6. Carpenter; given commons in 1392/3 and 1395/6.

V. Carpenter, Roger. 1396/7. Carpenter; called the college carpenter and given commons twice in 1396/7. Roger le Carpentere and Agnes his wife were living in the N.E. ward at Lay Subsidy of 1380 when paid 2s. (Oxf. City Docs., 27). On 3 Sept. 1390, when living in N.W. ward, Roger Carpenter was accused of taking too much for his work and in 1391 was fined 12d., William Mason de Eynesham being one of his sureties. Was again charged in 1394 (Med. Archives, ii, 11, 37, 79, 86, 120).

VII. Busch, John. 1400–8. Carpenter of Newbury; he and mate were given commons in 1400/1 and 1405/6, and he and brother received commons in 1407/8.

VIII. Joynor, John. 1402/3. Joiner; received 13s. 4d. in complete payment for woodwork of bell tower windows.

IX. Hull, Robert. 1406–9. Carpenter; paid 20d. for 6 days work in 1406/7 preparing planks for choir stalls and in 1408/9 was paid for candlestick (scousie).

xii. Gylkes, John. 1408–26. Carpenter; worked at Adderbury and in 1410/11 was given livery by college and twice received commons. In next year was on a large amount of outside work and in particular was erecting house at Drayton. In 1412/13 was given livery and in 1418/19 was paid 5s. 3d. for covering drain in college. Chief work in 1421–3 was at Adderbury and in 1423/4 was working at Hayford. The last reference to work by him is at Chakmor (Chackmore) in 1425/6.

xiii. Joynor, Adam. 1410–12. Joiner; given livery in 1410/11 and 1411/12 while on outside work.

xiv. Chalke. 1411/12. Carpenter; carried timber at Drayton.

xv. Pope, John. 1418/19. Sawyer; sawed wood for drain cover made by Gylkes. Between 1390 and 1394 was accused and fined under Statute of Labourers for paying his servant William Stanley too much (Med. Archives, II, 34, 123).

xvi. Barton, William. 1427/8. Servant to John Wyltsher; worked on new gate being built by the town's E. gate (6½ days at 5d. a day).

xviii. Tredwell, John. 1427/8. Servant to John Wyltsher; worked on new gate being built by the town's E. gate for 43 days at 5½d. a day. Also helped fit new lattice made by Giles Joynor for tower window.

xx. Carpenter, Robert. 1448–50. Carpenter; helped Wyltsher to fit planks above a large cupboard in inner vestry (2 days at 6d.) in 1448/9 and in next year was paid 4d. for repairing trestles of centre tables in hall.

THE QUEEN'S COLLEGE

i. Carpenter, Henry. 1351-79. Carpenter; most of career of Henry Carpenter is covered by the period before 1370, and he worked consistently from 1351/2 onwards. In 1369/70 he received 20s. for work in college and sold some hay and in 1378/9 repaired a room. It is possible that two men are involved. A Henry Carpenter lived in tenement belonging to St. John's Hospital near its gateway in 1353 and continued to reside until 21 Dec. 1371 at least. In her will dated 1 July 1374 Agnes his widow left the tenement to her kinsman Thomas Fleschere (Cart. St. John, 1, 103, 105, 101, 106, 112, 117, 122, 128, 136, 141, 148). At Lay Subsidy of 1380 a Henry le Carpenter and Elena his wife paid 18d. in the SE. ward and in same ward another Henry le Carpenter paid 6d. (Oxf. City Docs., 9 and 13).

ii. Carpenter, William. 1353-92. Carpenter; in 1353-5 was paid 4d., given a meal and supplied lime. He and Henry Carpenter were paid 5s. at this time also. In 1391/2 was working on new latrine, was given 2d. for a pair of gloves, was paid 18d. for a plank, received 8d. on Andrew Carpenter's advice and was given a reward of 4d.

iv. Benet, Richard. 1378/9. Carpenter; worked on chapel (23s. 4d.). In 1380 he and his wife Johanna lived in the SW. ward and paid 18d. Lay Subsidy and his servant Isabella 4d. (Oxf. City Docs., 15).

v. Carpenter, Peter. 1378/9. Carpenter; made windows for new chapel (13s. 6d.).

E. A. GEE

VI. CARPENTER, PHILIP. 1386-1402. Carpenter; rented a college garden in 1386/7 and in 1389/90, and in 1395/6 he and his mate made a 'porticus' (3s. 6d.). Worked for 3 days on a room in 1401/2. In 1380 when living in the NE. ward he and his wife Alicia paid 18d. Lay Subsidy (Oxf. City Docs., 21). In 1391/2 was accused and fined 5 times under Statute of Labourers (Med. Archives, ii, 3, 5, 39, 44, 78, 100, 111). Between 1384 and 1397 he lived in house belonging to St. John's Hospital inside the E. gate on the N. side (Cart. St. John, iii, 200, 207, 215, 222, 226, 235, 244, 249).

VII. CARPENTER, ANDREW. 1388-93. Carpenter; received 25s. 8d. in 1388/9 for making library desks and in 1390/1 was paid for 'twisses' (20d.) and received a mark. In 1391/2 repaired outside property (20d.), was paid 3d. for nails, received 30s. 9d. for building latrine and controlled work done by William Carpenter. In 1392/3 boys carrying desks from Andrew's house were paid 14d. and Andrew Carpenter received 29s. 2d. for work on desks, 3d. for nails and 8d. for twits for door to enclosure within library. Received further 26s. 8d. for making desks and 10s. for planks. Between 1367/9 Andrew rented cottage inside the E. gate from the Hospital of St. John (Cart. St. John., iii, 149, 155, 166), and in 1377 he and his wife and a servant Rosa were living in St. Peter's in the East and paid Lay Subsidy (Oxf. City Docs., 51). By 1380 he and his wife Juliana were living in SE. ward when they paid subsidy of 2s. (Ibid., 8), c. 1387/8 he rented 6 cottages in St. Peter's in the East belonging to Oseney Abbey (Oseney Cart., iii, 176, 183). Between 1390 and 1394 was charged and fined under Statute of Labourers (Med. Archives, ii, 19, 33, 123).

VIII. CARPENTER, ROGER. 1400-20. Carpenter; in 1400/1 he and his servants received 23s. 8d. in part payment for work on new hall. There are many other payments to an unnamed carpenter at this time. 384. Ull, William. 1380. Sawyer; lived in NE. ward and paid 8d. at Lay Subsidy (Oxf. City Docs., 27).
389. Warde, John. 1452/3. All Souls (xxxvii).
390. Wastell, William. 1505–25. Lincoln (xxi), New College (xliv), Merton (lx).
397. Whiteleg, Robert. Early 15th cent.–1448. Master carpenter; a specimen contract apparently based on an original one, by which he agreed to build a house in Cat Street, Oxford, has been printed by W. A. Pantin (Antig. Journ., xxvii (1947), 147–8) and by L. F. Salzman (Building in Engl., 415–6). A Robert Wheteley was master carpenter at Eton between 1443 and 1448 (Willis and Clark, Archit. Hist. Univ. Camb., 1, 389–90, 399). Was perhaps related to John Whatele or Wheteley who worked at Windsor in 1440–4, and who had a son William, also a carpenter (St. John Hope, Windsor Castle, 231, 396, 508, 511).
403. Wryght (Wryte), Roger. 1511–22. Lincoln (xxxiv), Magdalen (lxxx), Merton (lxxiv), Oriel (xxvi).
